The Faculty of Social Sciences

Pro-Vice-Chancellor

£Competitive + benefits

Our Vice-Chancellor, Professor Keith Burnett, CBE, FRS, invites an exceptional individual to join the University's Executive Board and to lead the continued development and growth of the Faculty of Social Sciences.

The University of Sheffield is one of the UK's top universities, with an international reputation for cutting-edge research, teaching excellence and an outstanding student experience. It has around 6,000 staff and 24,000 students representing more than 120 nationalities and an annual turnover of c£450 million.

The Faculty of Social Sciences is a large and diverse grouping of thirteen departments, including 'classical' social science departments, but also several other major subject areas, some of which are distinctive to Sheffield. In the RAE 2008, over 60% of the Faculty's research activity was graded as world leading or internationally excellent, with the majority of the Faculty's submissions ranked in the top 10 in the UK, of which five were in the top 5. This rich and exciting disciplinary mix, encompassing both world-leading academic research and education and also a strong practitioner focus in particular areas, uniquely positions the Faculty within the UK.

We are seeking an outstanding individual who can shape the future of the Faculty and the wider University through their inspirational leadership and academic distinction; who will create effective partnerships to achieve success; and through their open and challenging style, will play a key role in the executive team of one of the world's top 100 universities.
